

After I completely lost hope in public radio broadcast and after I was disgusted by how stations are desperately trying to impress their investors and advertizers rather than the listeners XM came into the picture. XM Radio has revolutionized my thought and lifestyle. I have learned so much in such a short period of time and everyday I admire it more. Now I know who won the soccer finals in Germany, how the power of song liberated South Africa, who's saying what in Capitol hearings and what's the weather like in New York incase I spontaneously decide to take the I-95 to visit my cousins. The best part is all this happens while I'm in an underground tunnel stuck in traffic. I can now honestly tell you that I am changing for the better everyday. I am no longer frustrated by sitting idle in the heat nor I feel the urge to road rage anymore. I no longer have to reach furthur than my remote nor strive for last century's fading signal. Miles Davis keeps me up when I'm sleepy and Howard Shore Calms me down when I'm angry. It only makes sense to get traffic and weahter information before you reach your destination not after you've entered their local radio coverage. XM Radio is democracy at its best. Please don't strip us from our first amendment rights.
